

Program Learning Outcomes Environmental Policy Analysis and Planning

1. Develop competence in basic environmental sciences, economics, and theory of the policy process.
2. Master a variety of quantitative and qualitative methods for analyzing environmental issues and policies.
3. Learn to apply this knowledge to analyzing actions to address environmental problems.
4. Acquire an understanding of how public policy and planning decisions are made and their effectiveness is evaluated.
5. Be well prepared to work on environmental issues in governmental agencies, non-profit organizations or consulting companies, or to pursue graduate study in environmental policy, environmental planning, public/business administration, or law.