

Program Learning Outcomes Women and Gender Studies

1. Comprehend and apply major theoretical approaches to the study of gender in local and international contexts.
2. Understand gender as historically changing and imbricated with race, sexuality, class, nationality, ability and other relations of difference (intersectionality).
3. Proficiently apply research skills to approach questions within women and gender studies from multiple disciplinary perspectives, and to identify, assess and utilize sources from both print and electronic media (interdisciplinarity).
4. Effectively communicate critical perspectives on local and global manifestations of gender and sexuality, through written, oral and/or digital presentations to diverse audiences.
5. Learn how to apply training in critical gender, culture and sexuality studies to legal, political, economic and cultural change processes outside the classroom.
